

Contractor Management

Are You Dealing with a Shady Contractor? If so, Hire Contractor Management!

Here are some true facts when dealing with contractors during a renovation project:

When it comes to dealing with contractors 78% of people have problems with their contractors during renovation. Also, 92% of renovations projects have reported being over charged with cost overrun and hidden cost. Most people end up paying 15% or 20% more on the actual agreed project value given by their contractor. These numbers may look a bit intimidating. Not all contractors are deceitful, but with these numbers it is hard to tell whether the contractor you hire will uphold their end of the bargain. That is why you need someone who can supervise your contractors. When you hire a contractor, you want to make sure that they do the job that you expect them to do. That is where contractor management comes in. Contract management can help maximize financial and operational performance and minimize risks for any renovation project.

Contract management will not only supervise your contractors, but they can help you deal with problems that you have with your contractor. Whether you are being overcharged, delayed in work, or if the contractor is showing poor workmanship - contract management can oversee all of it. Let's face it, many people are too busy to manage and monitor their renovation works. That is why it is beneficial to hire someone to supervise your contractors.
